Foreign Ministers Of 12 Nations Meet In Washington CEREMONY TO BE SOLEMN

Washington, April 2. The Foreign Ministers of 12 nations will sign here on Monday a treaty which they hope will prevent another war.

They will scratch their pens across the parchment of the North Atlantic defence pact in the U.S. State Department auditorium. There, less than nine years ago, in October, 1940, pellets were drawn from a glass bowl to determine the order in which men of the United States would be called for armed services in what proved to be history's greatest war.

STRATEGY AMERICA REVEALED

New York, April 2.

The American people, through testimony at the New York conspiracy trial and the spy activity repart of the U.S. House of Representatives Un-American Activities Committee, have been getting a good look at the theories and methods of Communist infiltration.

The New York trial involves 11 American Communist leaders. They are charged with conspiring to advocate forcible overthrow of the U.S. Government.

Neither the trial nor the spy report provide anything particularly new to students of Communist activity, but they do serve to brief it down for better public consumption.

Lord Pakenham actually asked the House to believe that no longterm plan could have been devised until now, when the Atlantic Pact has been promulgated.

That sort of answer was hardly consonant with the implicit warning contained in his negative statement to the effect that "the Government have never said that there is no danger of war this year" or with his admission on the Government's behalf that "we should do still more than we have been doing to bring home the state of danger in which we live."

Urges U.S. To Co-Operate With Asians

Washington, April 2. An American expert on Far Eastern affairs said yesterday the U. S. should resirt Communism in China by seeking friendly co-operation with the Nationalist movements of Asla.

This should be done, Professor George E. Taylor, Director of the Far Eastern Institute at the University of Washington, declared even if it involves rough handling of some of some of the Marshall Plan countries such as France and Holland.

He set out his ideas in a report published yesterday by the Foreign Polley Association, In-

Other contributors to the report, entitled "What Can the U.S. Do in China?" are Dr. Gerald F. Winfield, Secretary of the United Board for Christian Colleges in Chimi, and Professor John K. Fairbank, Director of the Regional Programme on China at Harvard University.

Declaring it is to this country's interest to keep up the fight lagainst the Chinese Communists. Mr. Taylor sald:

"With all the influence at our di posal and all the leadership of which we are capable, we should pin our policy to the non-Communists left in all countries that still remain free.

"Next we should pour men ne cautioned against unders and money into a large scale compaign to make clear our "Without such an organisation," policy as it exists.

"We have a clean record on supporting Asiatle nationalism in every area where we have immediate responsibilities. Some of our allies are causing embarrassment but some, such as the British, by their recent conduct of strength."-Associated Press.

CHURCHILL SURVEY

The world was yesterday sent day affairs broadcast from America by Mr. Winston of the Formosan gentry offered Churchill to one of the greatest radio audiences ever known.

Britain's wartime premier may now be in the political desert, and many of his ideas about politics are criticised as outmoded, but in another of his many roles—the brilliant historian and commentator on the passing show—the free world still regards him as supreme.

His Boston survey touched for vast numbers of people it | clarified the chaotic turbulence of the century. A and petroleum, and tobacco and close analysis of his considered opinions reveals no solution to any of the problems that distract the present simply urged that our stand was good, it was inevitable, of Plate and Aristotle, he does i not claim to be a Delphic

His speech had unavoidably to deal with the emergence of Russia as a dominant influence on world affairs, ways more formidable than Hitler, (with) missionaries in every country as a fifth column, awaiting the day observer cannot but agree. The Kremlin has indeed the dent after a recent visit reported of discontent. It is among popula- tration." overbearing madness of world domination to an extent that relegates the Czar, and the German Fuehrer to the realms of futile puerility. But when Mr. Churchill mentions a former hope that Russia after the war would have settled down amicably among the comity of nations, one fails to follow him. The Marxist aims of total destruction of all those opposed to the creed, the ruthless pursuit of the goal of complete global Communism, the utter abolition of views inconsistent with its ideology, are too well known now, and have been too fanatically practised, to permit any dubiety in the non-clouded mind. The Conservative leader coined one of his individual phrases when he said Russia had united the democratic world against it by deliberate acts because it fears "the friendship of the West more than its hostility." Cabled reports of his speech reaching Hong Kong do not elaborate this point, but Mr. Churchill touched there on a point not often discussed. The "iron curtain" which he first mentioned in 1946 works much more efficiently in reverse. From the USSR's population of 190,000,000, not a single tourist is permitted to travel abroad. The only persons allowed to leave Russian territory are fanatic Party members, believed to be so saturated with Communist theory a sign that the Bolsheviks should if possible be appointed hands have been repatriated, exas to be impervious to the were not wiped out after the by agreement between the pare cept 10,376 in the United Kingbourgeois blandishments of first world war-had natural- ties, or, if they cannot agree, by dom and 543 in the Middle East. the West, or scafaring men so | Iy no solution for stemming | the Secretary-General of the UN. | All of these had been offered terrified by the secret police | the Red onslaught, which inthat they will exchange only | filtrates and breeds like a foul | ist imperialism (including what might happen in Asia,

ANGLO-SOVIET PACT MAY BE ABROGATED

Denunciation By Moscow Confidently Predicted

Moscow, April 1.

Well-informed diplomats in Moscow forecast today that the Anglo-Soviet and Franco-Soviet treaties will soon be dead pacts. They were commenting on the new Soviet memorandum denouncing the Atlantic Alliance. When the Soviet Foreign Ministry first denounced the Atlantic Alliance early this year, many diplomats took the view that the two 20-year treaties

U.S. Sentiment To Be Judged

Washington, April 2. The forthcoming Congressional battle over appropriations to Implement the Atlantic pact may well be the gauge of United States sentiment on financial support of international pacts in general.

Récent proposals for a Pacific ppet and talk of possible Mediterranean and other regional alliances are almost sure to be called to the attention of the Senate or House by isolationist opposition.

Should the opposition be particularly strong it may discourage temporarily any serious considerution of work on other possible alliances.

State Department sources al ready have said that the talk of a Mediterranean pact was premature, but they admit that various facades of such an ar-rangement have been discussed on top levels,-United Press.

Boston, April 1. "Britain and the United States, sharing the same ideals, are strong enough to carry all our plans to succoss," Mr. Winston Churchill told more than 2,000 guests at an Impromptu speech at a private reception here.

Mr. Churchill went to the reception from the Boston Garden, where he had earlier delivered his major address.

Mr. Churchill was honoured tonight by the Massachusetts institute of Technology at cerempnies before nearly 14,000 people.

Mr. Churchill was invited by the institute's President to accept an "honorary membership in this company of scholars." The citation described Mr. Churchill as "a warrior statesman, student and maker of history."

SUNDAY BERALD polement,

SUNDAY, APRIL 3, 1949.

Sol Bradwell got up from his chair and stared down at the detective chief. "I got you where you are, Vannic--and "I can pull you out of there, see? If you get too wise for the job-"

Vannic said: "Jeeze-Sol-what's going wrong? Maxlin pulled the Grayber job-didn't I recognise him and some of his mob? Maybe he took Kennelli for the ride."

Vannic got up and shrugged. "I've got to quit coming up here—it's too risky," he said. "What about the Blue Street house. The Kennelli and Grayber deals stopped us there. Want me to fix it so that you can get the mobinside?"

Bradwell's eyes narrowed. "Godthat would be right, ch? I don't like Carr playing loose. Supposing he's put Guy wise that you got the dope-and sent him away?"

"He's been away for four days—and Guy may have quit the house. He may be suspicious. But I threw a bad scare into Carr—and he swore he'd get word to Guy that his old man was dying-he had to go South. Maybe Guy fell for it—Carr was a good front."

Sol Bradwell said: "Maybe Carr never got word-and maybe Maxlin didn't fall. Timmer's dead. It isn't hard to figure who got him."

Vannic said slowly: "Timmer had it reoming. That house is as good a spot as any for Maxlin. I figure he's hiding out right there." Bradwell's eyes held the small gleam. He was thinking shead, and Vannic knew what he was thinking. He was figuring on getting inside No. 26 Blue Street, and mobbing out Guy Maxlin. He said, thinking ahead himself: "I can try to find out about Maxlin. It won't be easy. Maybe I can use Gil Baggart, give him a tip. He doesn't know the house, and if I put him wise

I can hold him back." Vannic went towards the door of the office. He turned as he reached it. "On my way to Headquarters, the night Grayber got the dose, I ran into Updike. He was coming to see you. Did he get here?" Sol Bradwell chuckled. "Yeah-he got here. He stalled around—and after a while he got real nice. He didn't have anything to say, Don." "With Maxlin out-you'll be fixed, Sol," sald Vannic. Bradwell's eyes shone. "You'll be sittin' .nice, too," he said. Vannic nodded. "I can stand prosperity." He opened the outer door of the office cautiously. The corridor was deserted. He went out, down the elevator and to the street. He thought: "With Maxlin out it'll be simpler. If Sol goes over to Blue Street with the mob-it's a sweet chance-but Bradwell was-looking out for Sol Bradwell." Vannie breathed softly:

- "And Guy Maxlin's looking out for Guy Maxlin. And Don Vannie-he's looking out for-" He smiled grimly. He didn't went to rush things; he was sitting in a nice spot. He walked slowly to Main Street. Gil Baggart was moving towards Headquarters, on the far side of Main Street. Don Vannic saw him and smiled. He was thinking that it would be nice to get Guy Maxlin inside the Blue Street house. It would be nice to have Sot Bradwell go in with his mob. And it would be nice to have Gil Baggart sticking nearby. If he could swing that sort of a deal. and get in close himself-with two rode--- "Jecze-it would be a deal! A noisy deal-with a lot of quiet, right after. And me-sittin' on top of Centro City-" 'He broke off, swearing softly. He stood for a few minutes, thinking. Then he nodded his head. He went kiside a cigar store and bought pills.

might have been a good police official, only he wanted money in a hurry. I don't think he can win out." She shook her head. "Someone is a lot bigger, in Centre City," she said.

"Gil-do you think Sol Bradwell and Maxlin are the biggest men we've got to fight?"

'It's hard to figure." he said. "Bradwell's bigger than Guy Maxlin. He doesn't drop out of sight-after a couple of kills. He buys the City Council, hands the police a pension fund, and acts sorry as the devil about the state of affairs. But Maxlin is more of a fighter, maybe. He doesn't play in the open, but he collects plenty of graft. And Maybe — maybe there is someone bigger, Lila. But between them - they've got the City." He rose. "I'm meeting the Chief at seven." he said. "I think there's something on for tonight."

She went to the rear door of the big house with him. She touched his left wrist with warm fingers. "Ring me up, before you turn in, will you?" "Sure." He smiled at her and went cut and around to one side. He didn't look back. He was frowning a little; there was something about Lila Kennelli, some quality within her he couldn't straighten out in his mind. He walked two blocks to the spot where his roadser was parked, climbed inside and drove towards the heart of Centre City. When he reached Don Vannic's office the chief of detectives was walking-up and down in front of his desk. He came close to Gil and spoke in a low

"We've got that stoolle, Freedom. He's done some talking. Guy Maxlin is holed in over on the Northside. "I think wo'd better get him, but we want to do it quietly. We don't want the papers yapping at us, if he isn't the right man for these kills."

Gil Baggart nodded. The detective "You take one man with you—how about Uudike?" Gil said: "Sure-How do I work it?" Vannic went back of his desk and sat down. He acted nervous, and Gil did not look at him much.

"You and Updike go over to Blue Street—the number is 26. Better wait until about one o'clock. One of you watch the front of the house—the other had better slide around back. I'll fix it so the stoolie gets inside and tips Maxlin off that we're coming. We'll let a siren loose, five or six squares off. He'll come out in a hurry—and you grab him."

Gil widened his eyes. "Just the two of us?" "It's easier-for a quiet grab," Vannic said. "We'll take him in on suspicion of murder. Grayber's. Maybe he'll talk about Kennelli-I figure he did both jobs." "Yeah, but two men can't watch a house on all sides. He might get loose." Vannie got up. "What do you want —the riot squad? He's alone, with just that blonde of his. We were tipped

"All right, Chief. Suppose he doesn't come out?"

Vannle grunted. "When he hears the sirens he'll come out. He'll think we're coming, but we ain't there. That'll make it easier for you and Updike."

Gil smiled a little. "That's pretty smooth, Chief. There's only one thing wrong-suppose the stoolle wises Guy

"He won't. Maxlin would finish him if he told the truth, and he knows it. Anyway, he wants Maxlin caught. It makes it safer for him. I'll see that a car is five blocks away from 26 Blue Street at few minutes before one. At one the first siren will sound. And that killer will come out fast. You grab him-you or Updike, "I'll have some men in the car, in case something goes wrong. Bring in the woman, too."

Gil nodded. "I'll call Updike," he Vannic cut in. "He's inside the big room," he said, "I called him in. Don't slip up. Baggart. You want Kennelli's killer more than a lot of things, I gues. You know him. This is the chance."

"We've got to prove it after we get him."

A grim smile showed on the detective head's face. "That won't be hard," he said, Gii Baggart went outside and into the big room used by the detectives. He spotted Updike. "We've got a job—have you eaten Updike shook his head. Gil smiled at him. "Let's have a good feed. We may not get hungry again."

"Did Vannic frame the job?" Updike spoke low. Gil nodded. "He wants us to get a boost," he said grimly. "While we feed, I want to tell you some things. They may help-around one."

Updike widened his eyes. "It's that kindof a job, ch?" he breathed. "Night

Gil Baggart smiled coldly. "It's a quiet job," he said.
Updike said: "Well—let's go eat everything—we like." CHAPTER SIX

It was 12.30. A light fog blow in from White River, but it wasn't thick enough to mask the frame house at 26 Blue Street, Gil Baggart and Charlie Updike approached the house slowly.

The shutters were closed—no light showed through them. Updike said very softly "There's a rear entrance-" Gil Baggart went ahead alone. He come back in a few minutes, nodded. They went to the corner away from the river, went around to the next street. The fog was getting thicker. Updike said in a whisper: "He knew damn' well-Maxdin could slip pust us in fog. And he know there's fog here most of the time." BE CONTINUED

SWEDISH NIGHTINGALE

There can be few people nowadays who can claim to have heard Jenny Lind in person, although those who are able to do so must cherish that memory. Known universally as the "Swedish Nightingale", the story of Jenny Lind has been the subject of so much fiction that it is difficult to sort chaff from wheat

Certain it is, however, that her voice must have been one of exceptional purity and her popularity reached such a degree as to make her appearances almost royal occasions. From facts obtainable, it seems she was thin, pale and petite, and but for her voice and personality she would have passed as the merest nonentity. In the well known phrase she literally "had Europe at her feet" in the heyday of her fame, Kings and Princes vicing for her favours.

Jenny Lind was born in Stockholm in 1820 of comparatively humble parents; but at the age of nine it was apparent that here was a child on whom the Gods had bestowed a rare talent. Her talents—even at this age -were such that she was adopted by the Royal Opera House, where her training was undertaken at Government expense.

Unlike most infant prodigies, Jennie remained unaffected, as far as it were possible, by her unnatural surroundings, and devoted herself to learning all she could. It seems that her attitude was one of gratitude to Providence that had provided her with so lovely a voice.

Leading Role

At the age of 17, she took a leading role in a production at the Stockholm Opera House, on the strength of which she soon became an established local favourite. By the age of 20, she had little more to learn in Sweden and she decided to travel to Paris, where rumours of her voice had preceded her. This decision was not an easy one for Jenny Lind to make because she remained simple and unaffected at heart, considering it wrong to become part of society where easy virtue brought its own rewards while in Paris, she found it selfish and wicked and, while continuing her studies, forbore to sing in public, despite tempting offers from L'Opera Comique and La Comedie Francaise. After a year or so, she returned to

Sweden and gave a series of concerts both there and in Denmark, which were phenomenally successful. Meyerbew, the German composer, was then at the zenith of his fame and wrote personally to Jenny Lind, imploring her to come to Germany and sing the leading roles in his operas. Again, she hesitated to test herself in a strange land, but eventually did so. History repeated itself yet again and all Germany acclaimed her, receiving her on a lavish scale usually reserved ed for Royalty. Mendlessohn, reputedly in love with her, declared her to be "the greatest artiste I have ever known". There were, however, professional rivals who did not agree with this opinion and so Jenny Lind-beset by some lack of self-confidence — returned to her beloved Sweden, whose loyalty she did not wish to undermine by long absence.

After further tours in England and Sweden, she again returned to Germany, where she first heard from P.T. Barnum, the great American Showman. He was, of course, a showman first and last, and had Jenny Lind possessed the prescience of some of her colleagues she might have known from the start that her relationships with him could not be anything else than unhappy, to say the the least. Barnum was a master of publicity, and ready to exploit to the full any artiste in whom he saw the opportunity to further his own ends.

Nevertheless, Jenny agreed to make an American tour under his agency and she salled from Liverpool with the cheers and adulations of her English admirers ringing in her ears.

Contributed By "MUSETTA"

The same story may be told of her arrival in New York, where Barnum had played to the full on her advance reputation, supported by exaggerated charity. It was this latter factor, probably more than anything else, which endeared her to the American public. Full appreciation of her talents as a coprano was to come later, and when it did, she became feted as Royalty in all her public appearances.

It was, indeed, the same story all over again. Crowded halls, feverish applause, milling crowds in her private and public life, so that Jenny—sick of the humbug Barnum was constantly perpetrating - cancelled her contract, leaving engagements unfulfilled.

During her tour, Jenny had engaged n serious young musician — Otto Goldschmidt—as accompanist, and to her friends' amazement, married him in Boston in 1852.

Jenny, seemingly tired of public life and its constant, insincereties, gave one farewell concert and then sailed for England. Here, that lovely voice was stilled in what was virtual retirement. Thirty years of life were left to her, she died in 1887, after suffering complete paralysis for five years. She died at her home in the quietness of the Mendip Kills, amongst a people she had come to love dearly and who equally reverence her as an incomparable artiste.

Pity it is that this day and age cannot know for itself the beauty that must have been her voice. Today, we have only the dull facts of history to tell us of the "Swedish Nightingale", whose life-story is written in music, whose epitaph is one "of sweet music made, wherein a memory lives for overmore."

SUNDAY

The advent of Summer Time today has caused some slight rearrangement of the programmes so that the Symphony Concert is on the air at 9.45, 30 minutes later than usual. The programme promised includes:-

Violin Concerto in C. Vivaldi Enigma Variations. Elgar Nights in the Garden of Spain De Falla Moldau (Vlatava) - "Ma Vlast" Smetana

Vivaldi, a 17th century composer whose exact dates of birth and death appear to be unknown, was certainly an early originated of the concerto as it is known today. Buch took up the idea and in his own magnificent fashion, developed it to a fuller fruition, as did Handel with the Organ Concertos.

The "Enigma" Variations by Sir Edward Elgar were dedicated by him to various close friends of his, and each of the 14 variations "is intended as a musical portrait, the identity of the friends being but half concealed under initials or a pseudonym heading each variation". This Suite has achieved an outstanding popularity from all of Sir Edward's music, as well it may since the superb orchestration alone is worthy of continual study and admiration.

As a study in "less-advanced" spheres of modern music, De Falla's "Nights in the Garden of Spain" Suite is a welcome example. De Falla is the doyon of modern Spanish music, numbered amongst his better-known works being "El Amor Brujo" and the famous "Dance Rituelle du Feu".

Smetana was a Czech composer whose music has still retained quite a a wide degree of popularity. "Ma Vlast" (My Fatherland) was a suite of six symphonic poems purporting to depict, in music, pictures of Czechoslovakia. Of these six scenes, "Moldau" is one of the outstanding sections, and I am sure the music will prove itself worthy of attention.

MONDAY

At 9:10 pm Gregor Dintgorski, worldfamous celloist, plays Schumann's Cello Concerto. This is undoubtedly the finest composition Schumann ever wrote for a string instrument. In particular, there is an exquisite slow movement which is vaguely reminiscent of the adagio from Beethoven's violin Concerto. In several of his works Schumann showed an uncommon sympathy for the violin and it is possible that this characteristic-being more fully developed-induced him to write music so admirably adapted to "the soft voiced mother of the" string famfly".

In the hands of Diatgorski—who with Casals, Suggia and Brosa comprises an outstanding quartette of Cellists—the finest interpretation of this work can be expected. We shall not be disappointed.

TUESDAY

A special item tenight is a performance of Cesar Franck's Sonata in A. Although Franck's four chamber music trios were written before he had achieved the full panoply of later to be his, nevertheless his earlier Chamber music contains much that is admirable.

WEDNESDAY

An orchestral concert this evening includes:— Boccherini Overture in D Great Elopement Suite. Handel '

Artistes Life Suite Massenet -"The Great Elopement" is a selec-tion of Handel's music arranged for a ballet suite by Sir Thomas Beecham while at first thought it may seem a little incongruous to ally Handel's sturdy music with the delicacy of the Ballet. Sir Thomas that doughty champion of Delius, Sibelius and Handel however, has succeeded in welding the music to the ballet in truly masterly fashion.

Massenet, a typical, composer of the French school who died two years before the out-break of World War II' devoted quite a long proportion of his time to suites of light music. In true French fashlon, much of his music is delicate and easily digestible.

JUDITH'S LESSON

By Roy Crane

There was once a little girl called Judith. She was a real nulsance, for she used to put her finger into everything her mother made. Sometimes it was a nice ple and she would spoil it by putting her fingers into it and making a hole right in the middle.

One day a small parcel arrivod and it was addressed to Mrs.
Farrell, Judith could not wait until her mother came home to see what was in the parcel, so she opened it. Out came a pussy cat and and scratched her nose.
The cat ran away and Judith was afraid that her mother would scold her for her foolishness so she can after the cat but was unable to catch it.

Naturally when her mother came home she scolded Judith and sent her to bed without supper,

Still, this didn't change Judith a bit. The neighbours were complaining about Judith's behaviour and her mother was very sad indeed to have such a naughty daughter.

One day Mrs. Farrell decided to play a trick on Judith. She baked a hollow cake and in it she put a crab which was still alive. She put it on the table and of course when Judith came home she put her fingers into the cake and screamed, because the crab bit her fingers. When she saw that her mother was not at all surprised she knew that her mother had played a trick on her.

Judith had learnt her lesson for she'll never put her fingers into anything she sees again.

WORLD SPOTLIGHT

Canadian boys and girls have just enjoyed their first year of no rationing and no shortages of chocolate sweets and chewing gum. The average school-child celebrated by spending about HK$2 a week on sucking, chewing and i nibbling behind teacher's back.

Apart from fudge, ice cream and maple taffy, made by Mother, Canadian children were able to satisfy that sweet tooth with 500,000,000 bars of chocolate, 200,000,000 ice cream cones and 1,500,000,000 pieces of chewing gum during the year.

This was half as much again as they were able to enjoy during wartime rationing.

The idea of attending lessons in the open for six or more hours daily in February might make you shiver but to the school children of the famous Swiss resort of Zermatt this arrangement spells happiness and grand fun.

Above the village, at an altitude of 10,000 feet the sun at this time of the year is so strong that you can sit in the snow in shirt sleeves. At 8 a.m. the whole school starts out in the little mountain railway for the "Gornergrat" peak. Each girl and boy carries a few books, a big food parcel for picnic lunch and a pair of skis. Class is held normally from 9 to 12. Afer lunch break it continues for another hour. Then the Swiss kind of gym-skiing Climax of the day is the long downhill run on skis into the village by all-suntanned, full of life and mischief and, oh, so hungry after a day in fresh mountain air.

The girls will find it a lot of fun, but there will be long faces among the boys when safety-pin technique is introduced as a com-pulsory subject in New Zealand schools.

The Health Department offered the idea that youngsters should be taught, early, that bringing up a family is a partnership job, and the Education Department was a willing buyer.

The plan is that all children, in their last year at primary school, will learn how to bath and dress baby and the general principles of management-not real babies, but life-size dolls.

By Lee Falk and Ray Moore | I Am A Mouse

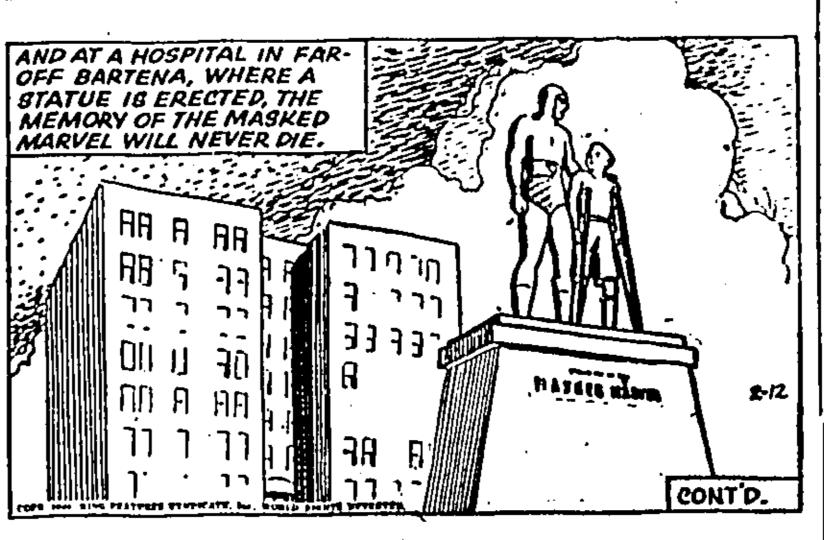

I am a mouse, and I live in a hole which is a dark corner of an old house.

At first I was a child mouse, but my parents fed me well each day, so I grew up very quickly.

When I was big I left my hole and stole food each night. My chief enemy was the cat and I'm very frightened of her. She tries her best to catch me always, but I can easily CBCDDe from her flerce claws.

Sometimes I have a lot to cat, but sometimes I have hardly anything, and have to go hungry for days.

I have to be very careful all the time, because the cat is always on the watch out for me, and ready to jump and selze me.
I dare not leave my hole if the cat is not asleep.

One night I went to a cupboard where the bread was kept. I bit a hole and got into the cup-board, and there I found a loaf of bread. Now, I had no food for 24 hours, so seeing the bread it made me feel just like a child looking at his new toys. So I ate as much as I could. I ate too much and could hardly walk, but I had to get home.

As I was coming out of the cupboard I came face to face with the cat! I wan frightened and tried to escape, but alas, I had caten too much and the cat was too fast for me, so I was caught.

The end is very sad and I need not tell you what happened. 1st floor, Kowloon.

The Treasure Hunt

Once in the Africa three hunters. Dick. Thomas and James went in search of treasure. They went to a near-by village to employ some natives to work for them. They started at dawn into the deep forest, after a while they heard faintly the beating of savage drums, and as they went on the sound grew louder and louder.

On the following day they were attacked by the bloodthirsty "Leopard-men." The hunters were ambushed, but they fought-fiercely and at last broke through the ambush. In the fight Dick died and many of the notives died too.

On their way home Thomas and James came neross a cave full of rubles and with it they returned home happily with their find, but sad because they lost Dick.

Autobiography Of A Pair Of Shoes

I am a pair of leather shoes and 1 belong to a little orphan boy named Joseph.

Before I was made into a pair of shoes I was part of a piece of cow's skin in a shoe-making factory in England.

First I was put together with some other skins to be dried under the sun, and when I was dried I was put into a machine to be cut, and after a lot of sewing and sticking I became a pair of shoes in the shape and fashion for a little boy. I was then sent to Hong Kong with many other pairs of shoes.

When I was brought to a shoe shop I was very happy at seeing many of my friends there, the high-heeled shoes, the big fat man's shoes and also the children's shoes.

Every night when all the salesmen were asleep; we would talk of our homes. This made the days pass quickly and I was there for about three weeks.

One day late in the afternoon while I was just taking a nap someone came into the shop. It was a tall man, fine looking, together with a fat boy. They were coming to buy shoes and after a lot of asking the salesman brought me out, and when the boy grown to be a big boy. So I was bought and brought to a nice house.

My little master enred for me very well, but as the days passed he could not wear me for he had grown to be a big boy. So I was brought to an orphanage and

It was Joseph, who had no one to love him, and had been living in the orphanage for more than five years. When I was given to him he cried out with joy and thanked the donor, or he had never neen a pair of shoes so nice and beautiful, although I was second-hand.

He takes great care of me and often polishes me with his old and torn handkorchief, and sometimes when he is alone or sad he talks to me and seems to trust me a lot. He is my good master and my best friend.

I still belong to him and I do wish that one day I could talk to him and be friends with him always.

ACCENT ON STRINGS

The melodious strings of Melachrino's Concert Orchestra in 'Musical Memories' replaced 'Sweet Serenade' in the General Overseas Service last week. To radio listeners in Great Britain and overseas the name Melachrino suggests popular classics, individual orchestrations and, above all, violins.

In recent years George Melachrino has come to mean something in popular music. He is himself a fine musician, who studied at the Trinity School of Music where his work on the exploitation of strings brought him high praise from professors. At the age of 18 he was acting as 'handyman' musician at Savoy Hill, learning to play the saxophone, clarinet, drums, and other instruments (he can play every instrument in his orchestra except the piano). He practised composing and arranging. and by the outbreak of war was a leader in his own right at the ill-fated Cafe de Paris which was bombed later in the war. In the Army, Melachrino inevitably found himself in the Army Broadcasting Department and before long was Director of Music.

When the authorities decided to form a British Band of the A.E.F., to correspond with the Glenn Miller American organisation and the Bob Farnon Canadian orchestra, George Melachrino was its director. Soon his special compositions and arrangements established his reputation, to which his orchestra, reformed since the war on a civilian commercial basis, has since been adding fresh laurels.

General Overseas: Sunday, 10.15 and Monday, 12.15 p.m.

THE SLEEPING PRINCESS' Tchuikovsky's ballet 'The Sleeping Princess' will be presented in the General Overseas Service by Bruce Beltrage. This charming ballet, which had its first public performance in St. Petersburg in 1890 and was produced for the first time in London at the Alhambra Theatre in 1921, was a revised version of what is perhaps the greatest of all Petipa's ballets, 'La Belle au Bols Dormant.' The theme is based on Perrault's well-known story, and the final scene is devoted to the usual traditional set of character dances, in this case suggested by other of Perrault's fairy tales. . The ballet's first London performance was produced with great care by Leon Bakst, and Sir Oswald Stoll spared no expense that the production should be worthy of its great traditions. The subject was much after Tchalkovsky's own heart, and he lavished all his skill on the score. The enchanting waltz, perhaps one of the most often heard of the many delightful melodies in this ballet, comes from the first act. The orchestra will be the BBC Mialand Light Orchestra, and its conduc-

"The total intake of proteins is above pre-war at the moment."-- Mr. John Strachey.

When you read that ghastly sentence, Elinor, does it occur to you that the speaker is talking about food? Probably not.

Incidentally, the same dim thought can be said more clearly in English. Thus: "People are swallowing more proteins today than they swallowed in 1939."

And even then it is only chemist's talk and unfit for the ears of honest cooks. Still, no matter, child. Before jargon reduces us all to making signs at each other, let us intake nutriment, consume intoxicants, and be merry, for tomorrow we pass on or away.

When any piece of electrical equipment suddenly ceases to function then the skilled craftsman immediately looks for a "short" (adds Domesticated George, cautiously putting his ear close to the element and listening intently), It is a demonstrable fact that all electricity companies flx their amusing little fuse-boxes in the most inaccessible places solely to annoy us (laughs Domesticated George, emerging backwards from a dark cupboard with his hair full of cobwebs). Yet they shan't succeed, the onfa! The clots forget the eld adage that good-humour makes all things tolerable!

Few things are impossible to dillgence and skill (observes Domesticated George, going down on his hands and knees again and patiently rapping the plated reflector with his knuckles). The surest way not to fall is to determine hackedi So saying, Domesticated George struck his wife's fire a violent blow with his clenched fist and accidentally knocked on the switch. When the memsahlbs returned later with the rations he was contentedly basking in front of it, glowing with pride and cooking sherry.

Asked what had alled the thing, he smiled benignly and said that it was just a mere technical hitch.

FAR EAST MOTORS LIMITED

In the recent international match between England and Northern Ireland for the Camrose Trophy there was one hand which provided a vital problem in bidding which neither side solved. After the bidding by both sides: South One Diamond, North Two Clubs, South Three Diamonds, what should North say? Here are the North and South hands:

South. $S \times X$ HAJX DAKQx'xxx

North. Sxx HKQx D J 10 C A J 10 8 x x

The actual bidding was:

Room I Room II South 1 D, 3 D, 4 H South 1 D, 3 D North 2 C, 3 H, 5 C North 2 C, Pass

In Room I the final bid was doubled by West. Only 10 tricks were made. The penalty was 200 points. In Room II 11 tricks were made but the bonus of 500 points for a game bid was lost. Why did these international players in both rooms fail to raise South's highly-constructive bid of three Dia-monds to Four Diamonds? Diamonds J, 10 is good "trump support" for a suit not only rebid to the level of three, but also rebid with a jump to that level. A jump rebid in the same suit implies a solid suit,

When in Room I the bid of Five Clubs was doubled it was strange that North did not even then realise that he had trump support for his partner's Diamonds. Perhaps he assumed that South's jump bid meant good support for his Clubs

Another point for consideration: Should West have doubled the contract of Five Clubs which he can defeat when he had no defence against a game contract of Five Diamonds which can be made?

The bid of Three Hearts (possibly to show a guard for a Three No-Trump contract) was very misleading on a three-card suit.

Pacifists Fought Science

In the Medical Research Council Green Book published recently, three women are named in the "Roll of Honour" wartime conscientious objectors who volunteered as human guinea pigs. . .

These three women with 20 men, all pacifists, chlisted at Sorby Research Institute, Sheffield for experiments for the benefit of mankind."

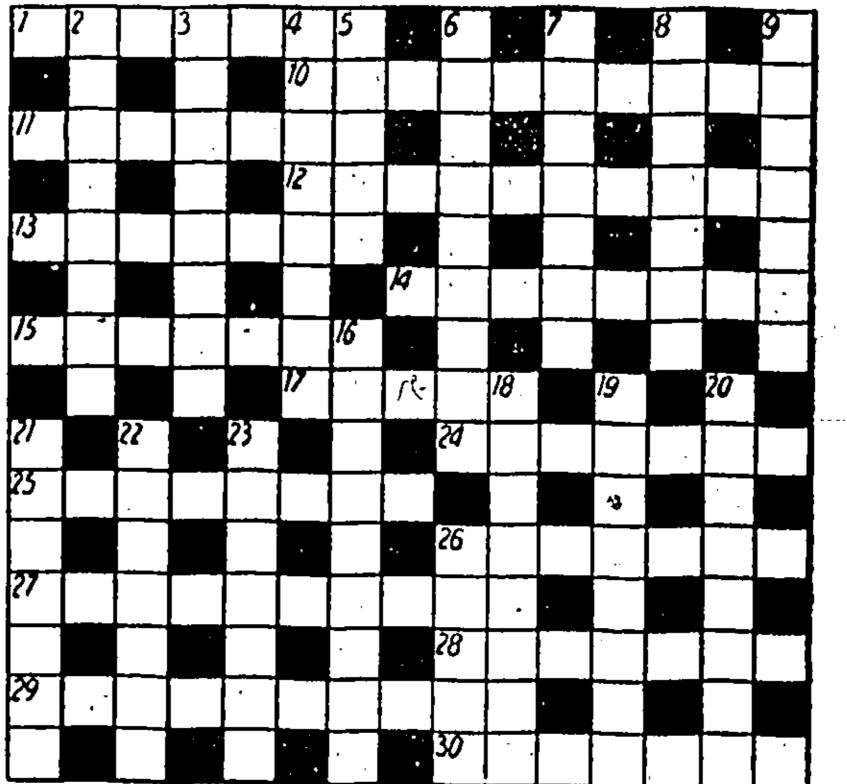

One of the experiments was to live on a diet seriously deficient in vitamin A, in some cases for more than two years.

The report says, "Volunteers were free to abandon this experiment whenever they chose. That they preferred to persevere month after month with insipid monotony of their diet and disagreeable routine of clinical laboratory examinations is no small tribute to their tenacity and public spirit."

When they volunteered, none of them knew what effects of being robbod of vitamin A would be. Four of the men contracted major illnesses. Two of them got tubercufosis, although both had been very fit at the beginning of experiments.

The results produced are very important scientific informations about effects of vitamin A deficiency in humans and its part in night blind-

Madrid, April 2. Ten years after Spain's civil war, General Francisco Franco's difficulties are increasing in the face of a hostile world.

-SUFFERER. As an immediate practical aid use this exercise: Take any small objective problem and look for its centre. Hold it while you examine all its aspects, look for desires that may be discarded, requirements that are not essential, and make your decision on the pivot of the problem. Daily practice in this gives you the clue to arriving at conclusions without being torn by emotional conflict.

But to get at the cause of your unrest you need to know yourself, some quiet reflection to see what you stand for, with whom you align yourself, for what you are aiming. Once you have the essential values in your life clear the conflicts are abated.

News In Necklines

By JANET MARTIN

One of the nicest features about this season's clothes is the variety of charming necklines and collars which grace the gentler, simpler lines of spring and summer dresses.

These graceful necklines do something new. They are more than mere openings for the neck, They act as frames for the head throat and sometimes shoulders.

For morning, afternoon and ends drawn through a slot or evening, the speciality of your frocks this summer will be the unusual and flattering detail at the neck.

The deep V, which plunges as low as it dare go, is to be seen low-cut and neck revealing and everywhere, on tailored linen perhaps the daintiest is the fichamorning frocks, on late-day line, which is rounded back and frocks with softly draped skirts. front and flaished with an allon dinner frocks with transpar- round drupe. China Predicted Complete Chinese Red control of China is inevitable and although there is yet no definite statement of policy, the Reds Will align With Russia.

That is the prediction of Mr. Frank Robertson, Australian newspaperman who was one of the first few foreigners to leave Peiping and who arrived here from Tientsin yesterday by the ss. Esang.

"I base my opinion on the !. number of Reds, their morale Tientsin, where the Esang disand equipment," Mr. Robertson said in an interview yesterday evening.
